As an IT provider, SAS does not operate within an industry where modern slavery is prevalent, nevertheless SAS is committed to taking steps to minimise any potential risks not only within its own business but its supply chain.

Zero Tolerance

Modern Slavery encompasses slavery, servitude, human trafficking and forced labour. SAS has a zero tolerance approach to any form of modern slavery. SAS is committed to acting ethically and with integrity and transparency in all its business dealings and in its dealing with other organizations. SAS has a dedicated compliance team involving contributions from across the groups' operational divisions including Finance, Legal, Human Resources and Sales.

Suppliers

SAS is committed to working with its suppliers to build greater transparency within its supply chains. SAS commits to acting ethically and expects the same from those with whom it does business. As part of its contracting process, SAS requires its suppliers to commit to comply with applicable laws and regulations, as well as SAS' policies.

SAS Policies

SAS maintains a number of internal policies to ensure that it conducts business in an ethical and transparent manner. These include:

1. Recruitment Policy: SAS operates a robust recruitment policy, including conducting eligibility to work in the UK, checks for all employees to safeguard against human trafficking or individuals being forced to work against their will.
2. Whistleblowing Policy: SAS operates a whistleblowing policy so that employees know that they can raise concerns about how colleagues are being treated, or practices within SAS' business, without fear of reprisals
3. Code of Ethics: This code explains the manner in which SAS behaves as an organisation and how it expects its employees and suppliers to act.
4. Procurement Policy: Among the procurement objectives upon which SAS chooses its suppliers are legality, accountability, and auditability. By using a wide range of best practices, tools and policies, SAS ensures that its supply chain remains strong and that it identifies the best fit for all procurement needs and objectives.

Due Diligence and Further Steps.

SAS continues to carry out an assessment of its UK supply chain, to determine which suppliers will be considered low risk of engaging in forced labour, and those which are considered high risk. SAS is also in the process of amending its standard terms and conditions and contracting agreements to introduce specific requirements to ensure that its suppliers comply with their obligations under the Modern Slavery Act.

As part of a wider UK procurement programme review, SAS continues to develop a comprehensive programme which addresses the risks of slavery and human trafficking both internally and beyond its direct suppliers by, for example, implementing a procurement policy for suppliers in the supply chain, providing training to SAS employees on the risks in the supply chain and business, conducting more risk assessments annually, and revisiting supply chain due diligence. SAS also continues to look at internal audits against the steps taken and other potential methods to measure the effectiveness of its efforts in this regard.

This joint statement has been approved by the board of directors of SAS UK and SAS Ireland and is made pursuant to section 54(1) of the Modern Slavery Act 2015 and constitutes their slavery and human trafficking statements for the financial year ending 31 December 2018.
